

Do I need a work permit in Turks & Caicos Islands?

To legally work in the Turks and Caicos Islands, nearly all foreign nationals must obtain a work permit (a few exceptions exist, such as for spouses of Islanders). There are several different work permit types, issued at varying fees. Obtaining a work permit can be a long and arduous process.

Why did the Turks and Caicos Islands create a work permit board?

As a means of improving service delivery and processing applications in a timely manner, the Turks and Caicos Islands Government passed new legislation which created and brought into force the establishment of two Work Permit Boards categorised by geographical zones.

What is a self-employed work permit in Turks and Caicos?

A self-employed work permit grants you the right to start a business in Turks and Caicos. Unlike the employed (skilled and unskilled) permit, the self-employed permit is something you can apply for yourself (or via an agent). Most business types require you to have a local partner with Turks and Caicos Islander Status (Belongership).

Do employers give preference to Turks and Caicos Islanders?

In the Turks and Caicos, employers are required by law to give preference to Turks and Caicos Islanders over foreign nationals when hiring for a position. Note that businesses are not required to give any preference to applicants with other permanent status, such as PRCs or BOTC citizens.

Can I work after 10 years of legal residency in Turks & Caicos?

After 10 years of uninterrupted legal residency in the Turks and Caicos, you may apply for a Permanent Residence Certificate (PRC). PRCs can allow the right to work or may not, depending on the category under which the document was applied for. PRCs with the right to work may be restricted to a certain category of work.
