What is the best mouse pad for gaming?

Without a smooth surface to glide your mouse on, your precision in some games might wobble. A good mouse pad isn't as key as the best gaming mouse, but it's worth considering if you're well equipped with everything else. The very best mouse pad on the market today is the Razer Firefly V2 Pro. What makes a mouse pad pro, you say?

What is the best fabric mouse pad?

The best fabric mouse pad is the Razer Strider. It comes in a few sizes, big or really big, and it promises to be nearly as good as a hard-top without the hard. It's pretty darn close, too. 3. Corsair MM100 Sometimes simple is best, and I'm not going to force you to spend any more on a mouse pad than you absolutely have to.

Is the MM100 a good mouse pad?

It's smooth on the top, rubberised on the bottom to stick to your desk, and, uh, that's it. There's no stitching around the edges, which mean repeated scuffs can cause some frays, but it's really pretty robust as far as textile mats go. The MM100 is your regular, modern mouse pad style for gaming. It's not too small, not too big.

Does Razer Strider make a good mouse pad?

This extra layer also firms up the entire mouse pad, and to keep it from fraying there's some smart black stitching around the mat's edge. This stitching is really tight to the edge of the mat, so you can actually push your mouse over the edge of the pad without issue. For a zero fuss and well-made mouse pad, look no further than the Razer Strider.
